

Matthew J. Slaughter

Matthew J. Slaughter is currently an Associate Professor of Business Administration at the Tuck School of Business at Dartmouth. He is also currently a Research Associate at the National Bureau of Economic Research, a Visiting Fellow at the Institute for International Economics, and a Term Member at the Council on Foreign Relations. In recent years he has also been a Visiting Scholar at the Federal Reserve Board and the International Monetary Fund, and a Consultant at the World Bank and the U.S. Department of Labor.

Professor Slaughter's area of expertise is the economics and politics of globalization. Much of his recent work has focused on the global operations of multinational firms, in particular how knowledge is created and shared within these firms and how their cross-border production arrangements are structured. He has also researched the labor-market impacts of international trade, investment, and immigration, and has studied the political-economy question of individual preferences over globalization policies. This research has been supported by several grants from organizations including the National Science Foundation and the Russell Sage Foundation.

More than thirty articles by Professor Slaughter have been published as book chapters and in journals such as American Economic Review, American Journal of Political Science, Journal of International Economics, and Brookings Papers on Economic Activity. He also recently co-authored the book Globalization and the Perceptions of American Workers. He currently serves in various editorial positions for Journal of International Economics, Journal of International Business Studies, The World Economy, Review of International Economics, Journal of Development Economics, and Journal of International Trade and Economic Development.

In addition to numerous presentations at academic conferences and seminars, Professor Slaughter has spoken to many non-specialist audiences such as the National Academy of Sciences, the National Press Club, and testimony before the Finance Committee of the U.S. Senate. His work has been featured in business media such as Business Week, The Economist, Financial Times, Newsweek, Time, The Wall Street Journal, and The Washington Post. He has been interviewed on programs including CNN's Lou Dobbs Tonight and NPR's Marketplace.

Professor Slaughter joined the Tuck faculty in 2002. Prior to coming to Tuck, since 1994 he had been an Assistant and Associate Professor of Economics at Dartmouth, where in 2001 he received the school-wide John M. Manley Huntington Teaching Award. Professor Slaughter received his bachelor's degree summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa from the University of Notre Dame in 1990, and his doctorate from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1994.
